MAKES CONFESSION FAVOR OF PRESIDENT

rs. Rosie Hertz Uncovers Three Grandnieces and One Grandnephew Add to Joys of the White House.

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—A four-entry race for the favor of the president of the United States is going on in Washington among the three grandnleces and grandnephew of President Wilson. Baby Jo Cothran, who lives in the White house, is in the lead at present, but James Wilson Howe, his 4-year-old sister Virginia, and Elizabeth Wilson, the 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred W. Wilson, are also very much in the race. President Wilson finds some time during his busy days to devote to his young relatives, who climb upon his lap and demand stories or attentions from him.

The White house baby, Josephine Cothran, asks for the president as soon as she wakes up in the morning and is taken in to see him by her colored nurse. Baby Jo, who sleeps in the nursery made famous by the Cieveland children, lives by a set schedule, which is approved by all the authorities on child culture. She eats a hearty breakfast of eggs and bread and milk and goes for a ride in her perambulator after she has greeted the president. Part of the morning airling is taken in Lafayette park, opposite the White house. On clear days she is allowed to join the children at play on the grass. She has already become a firm friend with the children of the Argentine minister and Madame Naon, James McMillan Gibson, and other children of well-known parents.

Luncheon with her small cousins at the same table with the president and his family, an afternoon nap, an autoride, a light supper and a romp at the children's hour round out the busy day for Baby Jo.

Baby Jo has set a style of infant democratic simplicity in the matter of clothes, for she affects only the simplest raiment. Her proudest possession, however, is a string of tiny gold beads, the gift of her grandouncle, the president of the United States.

A new use has been found for the silver cups of the famous White house silver service. for they make ideal milk mugs for Baby Jo and her small relatives.

EXECUTIVE SESSION DYNAMITE WRECKS

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Organization work in the senate today held the attention of Democratic and Republicans allke. The Democratic steering committees began work early upon the arrangement of the Democratic chairmanships. It was said that the Democratic assignments would be completed today. The Republican members have been arranged by the Republican steering committee. It is believed the committee will work under the special session until its reorganization of the senate is finished. The Democratic steering committee today granted the request of the Republican caucus for such an increase of membership of important committees as will the Republicans. Finance, foreign relailons and judiciary were enlarged from fifteen to seventeen members, and the the finance committee. The general understanding is that Senator Stone of Missouri will be chairman.

of the bill and two were opposed to it. On this showing the committee, upon which there is only one Sait Lake member, decided to let the house do as it saw fit with the bill, without either favorable or unfavorable report from the committee.

HE voice of Chauncey Olcott has been a kind of national institu ion for many years. To say that it failing-just a trifle-is like shouting "Down with the constitution." After breathing this sacrilege softly and deferentially it is proper to remark by way of atonement that he s a finer actor than ever, and that anyone who heard him for the first time last night would swear that there could not possibly be a better singer of Irish ballads in all the world. There is not a song in "The Isle o

Dreams'' that can compare in sweetness and Celtic spirit with "My Wild Irish Rose," and so the audience was regaled with this captivating melody between the third and fourth acts. In response to the plaudits Mr. Olcott appeared before the curtain and said smilingly: "Well, what shail it be?" The vote was in favor of "My Wild Irish Rose," and Mr. Olcott, after courteously saying that if it would be a pleasure for his auditors to hear the a pleasure for his auditors to hear the VINE. SCOTLAND a pleasure for his auditors to near the song it would be a greater pleasure for him to sing it, rendered it with all the old grace and feeling. Aye, all the old grace and feeling, but, sad to say, something of the old fire and power was missing-at least to one who remembers "My Wild Irish Rose" when it was in its radiant youth and before it was touched with the frost that must wither the most beautiful "Last Rose of Summer."

Will there ever be another singer of Irish ballads like Chauncey Olcott? It is true he had a predecessor, but Scanlan in the days of his highest renown could not sing like Olcott. And will the lrish song play continue to survive, or will it cease to be an institution when the signs of its dissolution. It is giving way to the more intellectual and imaginative plays of the modern Irish school, led by Yeats and Lady Constance Gregory. And while the old melodrama of Irish suffering and English tyranny is fading away, parliament meets in London to pass the home rule bill in spite of Ulster and all the peers. The Irishman no longer hides among the rocks of "The last o' Dreams" and sings of love and his country's wrongs, and the English soldier no longer ravages the land with sword and musket, but cools his heels on London stones and pales at the sight of a suffragette armed with a stickpin and a pot of give.

Times change, and we change with them. Somehow, the melodrama that has served the Joe Murphys, the Scanlans and the Channecy Olcotts for more than half a century has lost much of its appeal. Its jests are not as gay, nor its griefs as polgnant as in the good old days. But, nevertheless, we owe to it some of the happiest laughter of our lives and some of the sweetest tears that ever fell in love and sympathy. And, therefore, if you have ever "from your evelld wiped a tear and know what 'tis to pity and be pitied," pay your last meed of respect to the passing play and go to see "The Isle o' Dreams."

This play, like all the melodramas of its kind, is a sort of rosary of beautiful songs and sentiments. It is presented by an excellent company; the scenery is exquisite and above all there is Chauncey Olcott. Ave atque vale. Olcott's voice is stilled? Already we see the signs of its dissolution. It is giv-

The following theater notices are marked "advertisement" in order to comply with a strict interpretation of the new federal nowapaper law. In no seuse are they paid advertisements. They are items furnished by the press agents of the various theaters.

Ralph Herz is doing his "two-a-day" at the Orpheum this week. This bare announcement ought to be enough to get everybody going, but Ralph is deserving more words. His offering is mirth in song and story, in which a shy is taken at art; the chords of pathos, envy, lust and hate are struck, and also there are several original Jokes. In the recitations Herz holds the audlence spellbound with his theatricalism, especially that pertaining to "The Shooting of Dangerous Dan McGrew," in the Malamute saloon. Herz will be at the Orpheum every afternoon and evening this week, with the same fun and tragedy, and only the assistance of a red bandanna at his throat to help him "get away" with it.

It will be surprising if this will not prove to be one of the biggest weeks in the Colonial's season. The play being presented by William J. Kelly and his company is Mary Stone's story of a society thief, entitled "A Social Highwayman." Mr. Kelly in the title role has a part that is considered by many critics as superior to "Raffles" and other productions of a similar nature. The play takes place in New York and in a country home on the Hudson river.

Reynolds & Ross have evidently struck the right note this week. The laghter and applicate with which their audiences greet the funny lines and situations of "The Boss of 'Z' Ranch" can only mean "The Boss of Z Ranch can only mean that western comedy-drama is what the Garrick patrons want, "The Boss of Z Ranch" will be followed by a beautiful production of "The Parish Priest," the instead comedy made famous by the late Daniel Sully.

Perhaps the most wonderful feature of the whole story, as told by Captain Roald Amundsen, who comes to the Salt Lake theater Friday evening, will be his description of living out the winter, before the dash to the pole, in what was really a roomy ice palace, carved out of the ice barrier itself.

Surrounded by ice, the hardy men worked, slept and ate. They even rigged up a regular Turkish bath with walls of ice. The real start for the pole was made October 20, the height of the spring of those regions. The men had to get from the ice barrier to the land by climbing up a great glacier between mountains 15,000 feet high. They reached the pole's approximate vicinity December 14, and staked out a great square, which included the pole within its limits. They spent three days in the place, exactly locating the crucial point, on which when they bade it farewell with bared heads, they left flying the Norwegian pennant. Sale of seats opens tomorrow morning.

With only three more performances to go, the diversified bill at the Empress will doubtless draw capacity houses at each performance. The Sullivan & Considing booking department fairly outlid itself in sending to Salt Lake a bill that ambraces so many features under one head as that which closes tonight. Those Keen interest is manifested by theatergoers in the coming of Graham Moffat's famous Scotch comedy, "Bunty Pulls the Strings," which will be at the Sait Lake theater for one week beginning Monday, March 24. "Bunty Pulls the Strings' is unquestionably the most popular and most successful play of the day. In New York and London it outranked all other contemporary productions, running two years in both these cities.

"Bunty Pulls the Strings" will be presented here by the original all-Scotch company, with Miss Molly McIntyre in the role of Bunty. The members of the company were personally picked for the American production by Graham Moffat, the author. Most of them are personal friends of Mr. Moffat, whose acquaintain and Scotland is extensive. Mr. Moffat was for several years an actor and thus got to know a large number of his fellow players. From among these he selected a sufficient number of the caliber desired for the American presentation of his play.
